'Conflicts of the Mind - Redressal through Knowledge'

Discourses based on Yogavaasishtha Ramayana

Yogavaasishtha Ramayana is a book on the mind. Based on the 18-day morning-to-evening dialogue that transpired between Sri Rama and Sage Vasishtha in the palace of Ayodhya, the Text in its 32000 verses, discusses the conflicts of the mind and their redress through spiritual wisdom.

Normally spiritual wisdom is taken to be the crowning outcome of prolonged meditative and contemplative austerities pursued in ascetic environments. But, Yogavaasishtha discusses spiritual wisdom in its functional level, especially as related to the interactional life of a King or Administrator. The intelligence excelling in the external world can equally triumph in the inner sphere, leading to mind's expansion, poise and fulfillment. But many are not aware of these loftier dimensions of the mind, primarily due to lack of timely exposure.

All the confusions and torment surface when the mind interacts with persons, places and events in the world. The Text treats this distress by making the mind reflect upon the inner transcendental dimensions. The exposure results in enlightenment, generating inner sufficiency, skill and poise.
